The novel begins in 1754, on the eve of the French and Indian War. A group of British soldiers is sent to the Ohio Valley to build a fort. Among them is a young man named John Redcoat, who is haunted by visions of aliens. John believes that the aliens are trying to warn him about the dangers of the New World, but his fellow soldiers dismiss his claims as madness.

Meanwhile, a group of Native Americans is also preparing for war. They have been watching the British build their fort, and they know that it is a threat to their land. The Native Americans are led by a young woman named Red Fawn, who is also haunted by visions. Red Fawn believes that the aliens are on the side of the Native Americans, and she is determined to fight for her people.

As the two groups clash, John and Red Fawn find themselves drawn to each other. They both share a deep connection to the land and a desire to protect it. But their love is forbidden, and they must keep it a secret.
