Types of Rhyme Patterns

Perfect Rhyme

A perfect rhyme occurs when two words share the same vowel sound and the same consonant sound following the vowel. Examples include "cat" and "hat," "love" and "dove," and "play" and "day."

Slant Rhyme (Near Rhyme)

A slant rhyme, also known as a near rhyme, occurs when two words share some, but not all, of the same vowel or consonant sounds. Examples include "cat" and "cot," "love" and "luff," and "play" and "plea."

Eye Rhyme

An eye rhyme occurs when two words are spelled identically but pronounced differently. Examples include "love" and "move," "right" and "write," and "lead" and "read."

Masculine Rhyme

A masculine rhyme occurs when the last stressed syllable of two words rhymes. Examples include "cat" and "hat," "love" and "dove," and "play" and "day."

Feminine Rhyme

A feminine rhyme occurs when the last two stressed syllables of two words rhyme. Examples include "better" and "letter," "clever" and "lever," and "spider" and "rider."

Rhyme Schemes

A rhyme scheme refers to the pattern in which rhyming words appear within a poem. Common rhyme schemes include:

1. ABAB - Each stanza consists of four lines, with the first and third lines rhyming, and the second and fourth lines rhyming.
2. ABCB - Each stanza consists of four lines, with the first and third lines not rhyming, and the second and fourth lines rhyming.
3. ABCA - Each stanza consists of four lines, with the first and fourth lines rhyming, and the second and third lines not rhyming.
4. AABB - Each stanza consists of four lines, with the first and second lines rhyming, and the third and fourth lines rhyming.

Techniques for Using Rhyme Patterns

Mastering rhyme patterns requires not only an understanding of their types and schemes but also the ability to employ them effectively:

Vary Rhyme Types

Avoid using only perfect rhymes, as this can create a monotonous effect. Instead, incorporate a variety of rhyme types to add interest and complexity to your verses.

Use Rhyme Intentionally

Rhyme should not be used solely for the sake of rhyming. Each rhyme should serve a purpose, either by emphasizing a key idea, creating a surprise, or enhancing the rhythm of the poem.

Create Unexpected Rhymes

To avoid predictability, experiment with unexpected or unconventional rhymes. This can create a sense of surprise and delight in the reader.

Examples of Rhyme Patterns in Poetry

Example 1: "Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening" by Robert Frost

Whose woods these are I think I know. His house is in the village though;
He will not see me stopping here To watch his woods fill up with snow.

(ABAB)

Example 2: "The Raven" by Edgar Allan Poe

Once upon a midnight dreary, while I pondered, weak and weary, Over many a quaint and curious volume of forgotten lore— When the nights were long and cold, and the days were short and old, And the fire burned low and the wind blew cold,

(ABCDEDEF)

Example 3: "Ode to a Nightingale" by John Keats

My heart aches, and a drowsy numbness pains My sense, as though of hemlock I had drunk, Or emptied some dull opiate to the drains One minute past, and Lethe-wards had sunk:

(ABA
